How to Register for Dandelion (Pro)

Taxonomies: Integration · https://publishpress.com/knowledge-base/register-dandelion/

This feature requires the Pro version of the Taxonomies plugin

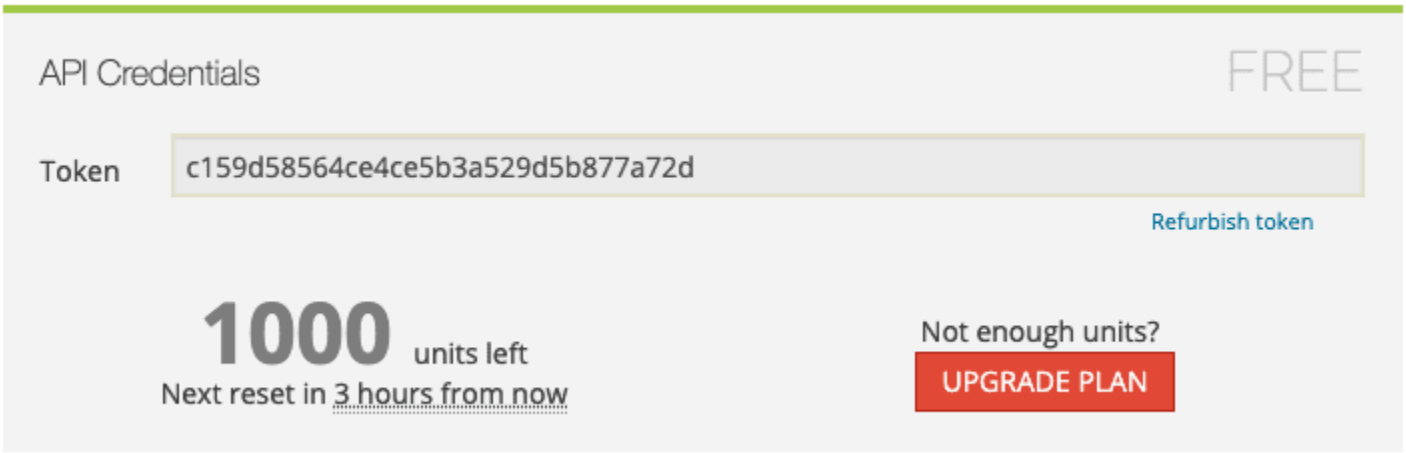

The TaxoPress Auto Terms feature has an integration with the Dandelion API service.

The TaxoPress team is not responsible for the quality of results from Dandelion.

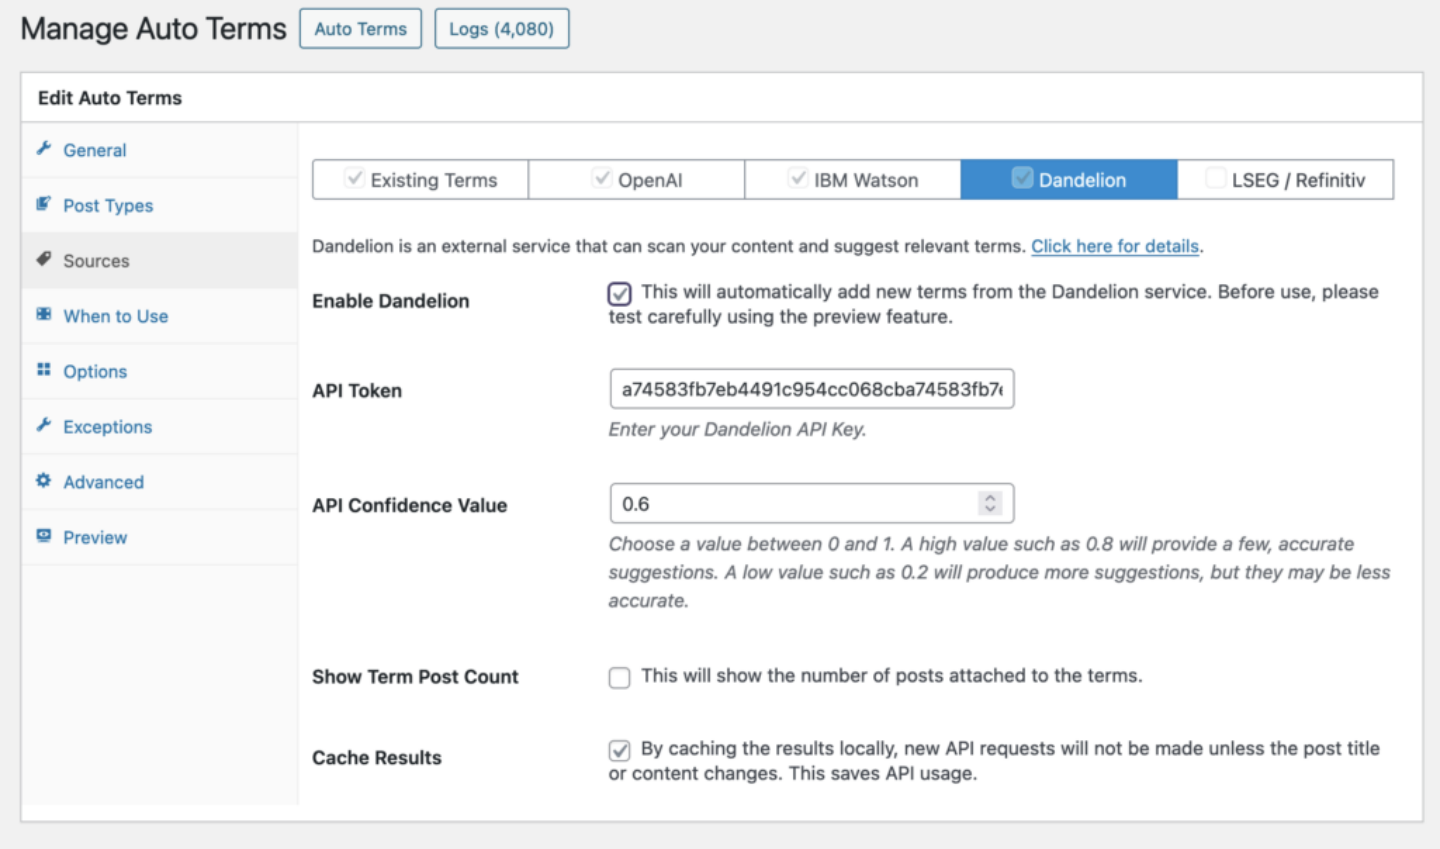

How to get a Dandelion API key

This guide will show you how to create a Dandelion API key to automatically suggest or add terms for your WordPress posts.

- Register for a Dandelion account.
- Confirm your email.
- Go to the dashboard.
- Get your API token:

- In your WordPress site, go to TaxoPress > Auto Terms > Sources.
- Enter your new key into the "API Token" field.

dandelion

Understanding Dandelion units

Dandelion's pricing model relies on "units". The free plan at Dandelion provides 1,000 units per day.

What do units mean? That depends on the amount of text you are analyzing. Their pricing page has some details:

> "You can think of units like a sort of internal monetary systems. We offer different APIs, each one with a different cost in units. Units are not related to a single API, but to the wider system. Every API uses units from your daily or monthly vault. The unit price for each single API depends on its nature. APIs can be billed by number of requests you make, by the complexity of your query, by the amount of data you need to crunch, ..."

Dandelion is not responding currently

Sometimes you may see a message, "Sorry, Dandelion is not responding currently". This can happen for several reasons. For example:

- You may be using the Dandelion service too frequently for your plan limits.
- The Dandelion service may be busy or temporarily offline.